Dr. Carol Taylor, PhD, RN, is a senior research scholar in the Kennedy Institute of Ethics at Georgetown University and a Professor of Medicine and Nursing. Experienced in caring for patients who are chronically and critically ill and their families, Carol chose doctoral work in philosophy with a concentration in bioethics because of a passion to “make health care work” for those who need it.

At Georgetown Carol directs an innovative interdisciplinary ethics curriculum grounded in a rich notion of moral agency for medical students and advanced practice nurses. She teaches in the undergraduate nursing curriculum, directs a practicum in clinical ethics for graduate students in the philosophy program, serves on the ethics committee, directs the ethics consultation service, conducts ethics rounds and ethics case presentations, and develops professional seminars in clinical ethics for health care professionals and the public. Her research interests include clinical and professional ethics, and organizational integrity.

Carol has a PhD in Philosophy with a concentration in bioethics from Georgetown University and a Master's Degree in Medical-Surgical Nursing from Catholic University; She now works closely with health care professionals and leaders who are exploring the ethical dimensions of their practice. She lectures internationally and writes on various issues in healthcare ethics and serves as an ethics consultant to systems and professional organizations. She is the author of Lippincott, Williams & Wilkins Fundamentals of Nursing: The Art and Science of Nursing Care, which is now in its 7th edition and co-editor of Health and Human Flourishing: Religion, Medicine and Moral Anthropology and the 4th edition of Case Studies in Nursing Ethics.
Dr. Douglas Olsen, PhD, RN is a Nurse Ethicist at the National Center for Ethics in Health Care, Veterans Health Administration, and associate professor at the Uniformed Services University. The Veterans Health Administration is the largest integrated health care system in the US and the third largest in the world with 152 medical centers and over 244,000 employees. Formerly he was an associate professor at Yale University.

He is on the editorial board of Nursing Ethics and a contributing editor for health care ethics at The American Journal of Nursing. He is a founding member of International Centre for Nursing Ethics. He has taught ethics at Sechenov Moscow Medical Academy as a Fulbright Fellow and at Hong Kong Polytechnic University as visiting associate professor.

His publications have appeared in a variety of professional journals including Psychiatric Services, Nursing Research, Journal of Clinical Ethics, and Advances in Nursing Science. His areas of expertise include research ethics, ethics in mental health care, and the ethics of health care relationships.
