The United Nations in the Arab World Program was launched in 2009 with the objective of exploring and analyzing the role of the United Nations (UN) in the Arab region and the impact it has had on regional politics and societies. Encouraging and analyzing research on cases where UN intervention has had an impact in the region--along with situating such UN intervention within broader political, historical and social contexts--comprises the core of this program.

About IFI’s UN in the Arab World Program

The United Nations in the Arab World Program at the Issam Fares Institute for Public Policy and International Affairs at the American University of Beirut focuses on the role that the UN has played in the region, and in particular within the political, security and humanitarian dimensions.

The UN of course is not simply an international organization, it also embodies a set of norms and practices that are played out and contested by a variety of actors on the local, national, regional and international levels. As such, the program has sought to promote research and contribute to policy debates, as well as provide resources for the academic and practitioner communities. The focus of the program on the Arab world, rather than the Middle East, is primarily because the ‘Middle East’ denotes a western geographical construct, while the ‘Arab world’ signifies a more unified area linguistically, culturally and geographically.

This research handbook on the UN in the Arab region is one such output that we hope will serve as a useful tool to stimulate interest and effective research on the role of the UN in the region. We are grateful to Martin Wählisch, Affiliated Scholar at IFI, for leading in this project and compiling this important guide.

About this Handbook
The Arab world has been continuously in the focus of the United Nations. The recent Arab uprisings, the ongoing Syrian crisis and the Palestinian question are keeping the spotlight on the Middle East and Northern Africa. The geostrategic position of Arab countries as gateways along key trade routes between the Far East, the West and the South make the region a place of challenges. While natural resources have blessed Arab states, rough climate conditions and water shortages have hindered the development of many Arab countries. In this context, the UN has played a crucial role in tackling political tensions and socio-economic opportunities in the Arab world.

Aim and Content of the Handbook
This research handbook aims to provide guidance to students, researchers and practitioners on current UN affairs in the Middle East and Northern Africa. It offers entry-points for exploring the role of the UN in the region while explaining the various facets of the world organization’s activities, which range from political and diplomatic efforts to humanitarian, human rights and economic issues. The handbook includes references to key UN documents, such as relevant Security Council decisions and General Assembly resolutions. It lists relevant legal documents, such as international treaties and conventions, as well as peace agreements. The handbook also flags landmark reports issued by the UN Secretary General and other institutions. In addition, it provides links to specialized thematic research guides and selected secondary sources, such as working papers and academic journal articles. Special attention is given to publicly available open-sources and research from the IFI-AUB community.

Structure of the Handbook
The handbook is structured along 10 cases, which exemplify how the UN is engaged in Arab countries. Each chapter has a thematic focus area and a specific example it elaborates on. Chapter 1 focuses on issues of peace and security, addressing the Palestine question and the role of the UN General Assembly. Chapter 2 concentrates on UN peacemaking, and elaborates on the armed conflict in Syria and the efforts of the UN Special Representative for Syria. Chapter 3 touches on peacebuilding, highlighting the function of the UN Assistance Mission for Iraq for national reconciliation in the country. Chapter 4 looks at peacekeeping in the context of the Israel-Lebanon conflict, introducing the mandate of the UN Interim Force in Lebanon. Chapter 5 provides references on the topic of Palestinian refugees, explaining the role of the United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East. Chapter 6 focuses on human rights, specifically on women’s rights in the Arab world and the work of the Office of the High Commissioner for Human Rights. Chapter 7 deals with legal issues regarding Transitional Justice and the Special Tribunal for Lebanon. Chapter 8 captures key research entry-points concerning economic and social issues in the Arab world, using the Millennium Development Goals and the efforts of the UN Economic and Social Commission for Western Asia as examples. Chapter 9 features climate change in the Arab world as a pressing environmental issue, with a focus on the UN Framework Convention on Climate Change. Chapter 10 relates to the topic of energy and natural resources, examining the role of the UN in facilitating a solution for the Lebanon-Israel offshore oil and gas dispute.

Prior to the 10 cases, the research handbook gives a short introduction on the history of the UN in the Arab world. In order to help students understand how to research UN documents efficiently, a summary about the Official Document System of the United Nations is provided. The handbook also includes an overview about key UN terminology in English and Arabic.

The research handbook is understood to be an ongoing effort. Suggestions, ideas and comments to enhance it further are welcomed.

Enjoy reading and exploring the handbook.

Introduction

The UN in the Arab World

Political and security developments in the Arab world have been closely interlinked with the work of the UN since its creation after World War II in 1945. However, while many Arab states have turned to UN agencies, programs, and funds for support of policy-making and the implementation of economic and social reforms, the role of the UN in the region has been not uncontroversial. The following introduction gives a short overview about the history of the UN in the Arab world, describing past and present endeavours.

History

After the end of World War I and the dissolution of the Ottoman Empire, the modern Arab world was drawn out and shaped by European colonial powers. The trusteeship system of the League of Nations, the predecessor of the United Nations, granted France a mandate over Syria and Lebanon, while the United Kingdom was given mandatory authority over Palestine, Transjordan and Iraq.

Historically, there has been a heavy focus of UN activities on Palestine. The end of World War II ushered in the era of the United Nations, which became a forum and arena for political matters of the region. In 1947, the UN General Assembly endorsed the partition of Palestine into an Arab and a Jewish state, which has been regarded as a starting point for the ongoing Arab-Israeli conflict.

The UN Security Council tasked the Swedish diplomat Folke Bernadotte to serve as the first UN Mediator in Palestine to bring about an end to the armed conflict. In 1948, the United Nations Truce Supervision Organization (UNTSO) was deployed to the region as the first UN military observer mission, which remained in the region to supervise the Armistice Agreements between Israel and the neighbouring Arab countries ever since.

In 1949, the United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East (UNRWA) was created to provide education, health care, social services and humanitarian aid to Palestinian refugees. UNRWA is the only UN relief and human development agency ever established that is dedicated to helping refugees from a specific region or conflict.

Responding to the Suez Crisis in 1956, the UN dispatched its first large international peacekeeping force. The United Nations Emergency Force (UNEF) was established to facilitate an orderly withdrawal of British, French and Israeli troops from Egypt, and to monitor activity at the 1949 Egyptian-Israeli Armistice Demarcation Line. In 1973, the second United Nations Emergency Forces (UNEF II) was mandated by United Nations General Assembly to supervise the ceasefire between Egyptian and Israeli forces at the end of the Yom Kippur War and to control the established buffer zones.
Peacekeeping Missions in the Region

Among other peacekeeping missions in the Arab world have been the United Nations Observation Group in Lebanon (UNOGIL), which was mandated to end the Lebanon crisis of 1958; the United Nations Yemen Observation Mission (UNYOM) from 1963-1964, which was tasked with observing the implementation of the disengagement agreement between Saudi Arabia and the United Arab Republic to end the Yemen Civil War; the United Nations Iran-Iraq Military Observer Group (UNIIMOG) from 1988–1991, which verified and supervised the withdrawal of forces after the Iran-Iraq war; United Nations Iraq-Kuwait Observation Mission (UNIKOM) from 1991-2003, which monitored the demilitarized zone along the Iraq-Kuwait border following the First Gulf War; and most recently, the United Nations Supervision Mission in Syria (UNSMIS) in 2012, which was set up to monitor the cessation of armed violence in Syria.

In Northern Africa, the United Nations Operation in Somalia (UNOSOM I) from 1992-1993 and the United Nations Operation in Somalia II (UNOSOM II) from 1993-1995, which were both tasked with securing humanitarian assistance and ceasefire monitoring; the United Nations Aouzou Strip Observer Group (UNASOG), which was established by the Security Council in 1994 with the mandate to monitor the withdrawal of the Libyan administration and forces from the Aouzou Strip; and the United Nations Mission in the Sudan (UNMIS), which was deployed from 2005-2011 due to the Second Sudanese Civil War, played a crucial role to maintain peace and security.

As of the beginning of 2014, there are seven on-going peacekeeping operations stationed in the Arab region. Among others, the aforementioned United Nations Truce Supervision Organization (UNTSO), and the subsequent United Nations Disengagement Observer Force (UNDOF) and the United Nations Interim Force in Lebanon (UNIFIL) are based in the region. Together with UNTSO, UNDOF monitors the buffer zone between Israel and Syria since 1974. Since 1978, UNIFIL is mandated with confirming the withdrawal of Israeli forces from Southern Lebanon.

Another peacekeeping mission in the Arab region is the United Nations Mission for the Referendum in Western Sahara (MINURSO). Initially founded in 1991, MINURSO continues to monitor the ceasefire between Morocco and the Polisario Front, and works on demining and confidence building measures.

Regarding the Sudanese conflicts, the United Nations/ African Union Mission in Darfur (UNAMID); the United Nations Interim Security Force for Abyei (UNISFA), and the United Nations Mission in the Republic of South Sudan (UNMISS) are in place. With nearly 21,000 uniformed personnel in the field, as well as a large contingent of civilian personnel, the joint UN-AU peacekeeping operation in Darfur (UNAMID) remains, as of the beginning of 2014, the largest UN peacekeeping mission in the world. The mission supports the implementation of the Darfur Peace Agreement (DPA), secures access for humanitarian assistance throughout Darfur, aims to create an inclusive political process about human rights and rule of law, is in charge of the implementation of Disarmament, Demobilization, and Reintegration programs (DDR), while it monitors and reports on the situation along the Sudanese borders with Chad and the Central African Republic. Since 2011, UNISFA monitors the Abyei Area in Sudan and is authorized to use force for the protection of civilians and humanitarian workers in the area. Also since 2011, UNMISS is on the ground to consolidate peace and security and to help establish conditions for development.

Peacemaking Efforts, Political Missions and “Good Offices”

Since the foundation of the UN, peacemaking and “good offices” efforts have been at the heart of the organization’s activities in the region. Good offices of the Secretary General are, for instance, currently carried out by the UN Special Representative for Syria, the Special Adviser to the Secretary General on Yemen, and the Personal Envoy of the Secretary General for Western Sahara. Ongoing UN political missions comprise the Office of the United Nations Special Coordinator for the Middle East Peace Process (UNSCO); the Office of the United Nations Special Coordinator for Lebanon (UNSCOL); the United Nations Assistance Mission for Iraq (UNAMI); the United Nations Support Mission in Libya (UNSMIL); and, most recently, the United Nations Assistance Mission in Somalia (UNSOM).

As the mandating of the UN Special Representative for Syria and the joint UN-AU peacekeeping operation in Darfur (UNAMID) exemplify, efforts of the United Nations are increasingly carried out in hybrid collaborations. The idea of such joint endeavours is to bring together regional and international strengths, while anchoring peacekeeping and peacemaking in the local context, and enabling more regionally grown solutions apart from international interventions.

Agencies, Programs and Funds

In addition to peacekeeping and political missions, various agencies, programs, and funds of the UN system are based in the Arab world. Among others, the United Nations Development Programme (UNDP), the United Nations Children’s Fund (UNICEF), the World Food Programme (WFP), the United Nations Environment Programme (UNEP), the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees (UNHCR), the United Nations Human Settlements Programme (UN-HABITAT), the United Nations Volunteers (UNV), the United Nations Entity for Gender Equality and the Empowerment of Women (UN WOMEN), the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime (UNODC), the International Labour Organization (ILO), the Food and Agriculture Organization (FAO), the United Nations Population Fund (UNFPA), and World Food Programme (WFP) operate in the region.

Arab states are members of the United Nations Economic and Social Commission for Western Asia (ESCWA) and the United Nations Economic Commission for Africa (UNECA), which are branches of the United Nations Economic and Social Council (ECOSOC) that constitutes one of the principal organs of the United Nations. In several Arab states, the UN also maintains United Nations Information Centres (UNIC), such as in Algeria, Lebanon, Egypt, Sudan, Bahrain, Morocco, Yemen, Libya, and Tunisia.

As this introduction has shown, the role of the UN in the Arab world is multi-faceted. Peacekeeping missions and international diplomatic efforts are a part of the UN’s daily work in the region. The future role of the UN in the Arab region will depend on the success of its current efforts, aiming at maintaining peace and security while enhancing economic development and social equality in the spirit of the UN Charter.

UN Political Missions, Good Offices Missions and Peacekeeping Missions in the Arab World
Introduction

The United Nations system produces hundreds of documents every year. They range from UN Security Council/General Assembly resolutions, reports of the Secretary General, member states reports, to working papers and annual reports, released in printed or electronic form.

Finding a certain document or a series of reports on a certain issue can be like trying to find the needle in the haystack.

The following overview gives an insight into the system and indexing of official UN documents.

Understanding the UN documentation system and indexing helps in tracing back documents to their issuing entity and eventually creates a better perspective on how decision-making processes develop in the United Nations.
UN documents are identified by an alphanumeric number called a “UN Document Symbol”. Among others, the letters in the UN document symbol system identify the issuing body and date of issuing.

</tr>
</table>
In 1975, with its 31st Annual Session, the General Assembly began numbering its resolutions following the indication of the annual Session (e.g. “A/RES/31/1”, meaning: first resolution in 31st Session).

Prior to 1975, the General Assembly numbered its resolutions incrementally instead of starting over each year (e.g. A/RES/2904 (XXVII), meaning: Session XXVII, 2904th resolution since the beginning of the General Assembly’s work).

Unlike the current practice of the General Assembly, the Security Council does not renumber its resolutions each new year, but continues its numbering for resolutions incrementally.
The UN maintains different types of documents ranging from verbatim and summary records to resolutions, reports and yearbooks.

<tr>
<th>Verbatim and summary records</th>

<th>Reports</th>
<th>Mimeographed documents</th>
<th>Yearbooks and periodicals</th>

</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Complete transcripts of meetings, so called “verbatim”, are kept in the Official Records of the Security Council, the General Assembly, and the Trusteeship Council. The Economic and Social Council and the Trade and Development Board maintain only “minutes” of their meetings.</td>
<td>Some UN organs and institutions, such as the Security Council, the General Assembly or the Human Rights Council, issue their decisions in “resolutions.”</td>
<td>“Reports” inform on results and activities of UN entities and organs. Example are reports of the Secretary General to the General Assembly and Security Council about peacekeeping missions or specific thematic issues.</td>
<td>“Mimeographed documents”, also known as “masthead documents”, are the first and only published format for many UN documents, which only appear as draft documents, initial publication of important items such as resolutions, as well as many ephemeral items of marginal interest to those outside the organization.</td>
<td>The UN publishes a number of “yearbooks” and “periodicals”, such as the Yearbook of the United Nations and the UN Chronicle.</td>
</tr>
</table>
Most UN indexes and collections do not include publications of the autonomous agencies of the UN system, such as the United Nations Educational, Scientific, and Cultural Organization (UNESCO), the International Labour Organization (ILO), and the Food and Agriculture Organization (FAO).

These agencies have their own separate publication programs and documentation system.

Official UN documents also need to be differentiated from UN Sales Publications, which are international reference materials in paper or electronic format published by the United Nations and earlier by the League of Nations.

They are for general sale and comprise both books and periodicals, including the UN Treaty Series and the UN Yearbook.

Since 1947, the UN has been working on the Palestine Question, which remains one of its most central, unresolved issues.

International attempts to broker a just and lasting solution have not been successful so far.

Meanwhile, the Palestinian authorities have been investing efforts in approaching UN institutions for the Palestinian cause, especially through the UN General Assembly.

In 1947, the General Assembly constituted a Special Committee for all questions and issues relevant to the question of Palestine, which was followed three decades later by the establishment of the Committee on the Exercise of the Inalienable Rights of the Palestinian People.

In 1974, the General Assembly granted the Palestinian Liberation Organization (PLO) observer status.

In 2004, following a request by the UN General Assembly, the International Court of Justice (ICJ) issued an advisory opinion on the construction of the wall in the Occupied Palestinian Territory.

In 2012, the majority of UN member states voted in the General Assembly for the admission of Palestine to become a “non-Member Observer State”, which caused international debate about the status and the statehood of Palestine.

In 2013, the UN General Assembly declared the year 2014 as the International Year of Solidarity with the Palestinian People.
UN General Assembly Resolution 181, Nov. 29, 1947
This resolution recommended the partition of Palestine into an independent Arab State and Jewish State, the creation of an Economic Union of Palestine, and a Special International Regime for the City of Jerusalem.

UN General Assembly Resolution 194, Dec. 11, 1948
The UN General Assembly established the Right of Return for Palestinian refugees.

Introduction

Supporting and initiating peacemaking efforts is one of the key duties of the United Nations.

Since its foundation after World War II, the United Nations has played a crucial role in facilitating the peaceful resolution of armed conflicts around the world.

As a part of international diplomacy, mediation and “good offices” are carried out through the UN Secretary General and UN envoys.

In the case of the Syrian crisis, the UN and the League of Arab States initially emitted efforts to help explore a peaceful, political solution to the conflict through a Joint Special Representative for Syria (JSRS).

In July 2014, UN Secretary General Ban Ki-moon announced the appointment of Staffan de Mistura as his Special Envoy for the Syrian crisis, following the peace-facilitation efforts of the Joint Special Representatives Lakhdar Brahimi and Kofi Annan.
UN Security Council Resolution 2043, April 21, 2012
The resolution established the United Nations Supervision Mission in Syria (UNSMIS).

In this statement, the Security Council welcomed the intensifying cooperation between the UN and the League of Arab States, reiterated the Council’s commitment to a comprehensive Arab-Israeli peace and welcomed the appointment of the Joint Special Representative for Syria.

These meeting records document the Security Council’s consultations on the situation in the Middle East, including Syria in August 2013.

The Six Point Proposal is a peace plan proposed by Kofi Annan in March 2012 with the aim to end the armed conflict in Syria.

Final Communiqué of the Action Group for Syria (Geneva Communiqué), June 30, 2012
In 2012, the UN-backed Action Group for Syria released this communiqué (Geneva I) which called for all parties to immediately re-commit to a sustained cessation of armed violence, to fully cooperate with UN monitors, and to implement the Six Point Proposal.

In 2013, Syria joined the Chemical Weapons Convention (CWC) and agreed to the destruction of its chemical weapons, supervised by the Organization for the Prohibition of Chemical Weapons (OPCW).

- International treaties can be accessed online through the UN Treaty Collection database under http://treaties.un.org/ (go to United Nations Treaty Series Online Collection), which provides information on the status of over 550 major multilateral treaties deposited with the UN Secretary General covering matters such as human rights, refugees, climate change, and disarmament.

- Based in The Hague and operating as an independent intergovernmental organization in close cooperation with the UN, the OPCW is the implementing body of the Chemical Weapons Convention. More information, including reports and thematic studies, can be accessed online under: http://www.opcw.org/

In 2011, the UN Independent International Commission of Inquiry on the Syrian Arab Republic was established by the Human Rights Council to investigate all alleged violations of international human rights law in Syria; this is the Commission’s sixth report.

- All reports of the UN Independent International Commission of Inquiry on the Syrian Arab Republic are available online under: http://www.ohchr.org/EN/HRBodies/HRC/IICISyria/Pages/IndependentInternationalCommission.aspx

This is the final report of the UN investigation into chemical weapons use in Syria.

In support of post-conflict states in transition and in order to prevent a relapse into hostilities, the UN undertakes “peacebuilding” as a political and socio-economic endeavor. The term peacebuilding came into widespread use after the adoption of the UN Agenda for Peace in 1992, which emphasized that the restoration of order and the transformation of state structures often require international technical assistance.

Among other missions in the Arab world, the UN Assistance Mission for Iraq (UNAMI) is an example of the UN’s efforts in the region to promote political dialogue and national reconciliation. Established in 2003, UNAMI aims at supporting Iraq’s reconstruction by assisting local and national government institutions in strengthening the rule of law and the Iraqi justice system, facilitating military reintegration programs, contributing and coordinating humanitarian relief, and supporting the return of refugees and internally displaced persons.

One of UNAMI’s tasks is to implement the International Compact with Iraq, which was jointly launched as an initiative in 2007 by the Government of the Republic of Iraq and the UN with the vision to strengthen democracy and economic development in the country in the spirit of the UN Millennium Development Goals (MDGs).

Peacekeeping

Following Israel’s first invasion of Lebanon in 1978, the UN Security Council created the United Nations Interim Force in Lebanon (UNIFIL) to observe the withdrawal of the Israeli Army, restore international peace and security, and assist the Lebanese government in regaining its effective authority in the area of conflict.

The mandate of the UN peacekeeping mission also includes helping ensure humanitarian access to civilian populations, and the voluntary and safe return of displaced persons.

Following the 2006 war, UNIFIL was expanded to a maximum of 15,000 military personnel, and included the first Naval Task Force ever to take part in a United Nations peacekeeping mission.
Peacekeeping

  This resolution was adopted five days after the Israeli invasion of Lebanon. The Security Council called on Israel to withdraw its forces immediately from Lebanon and established the United Nations Interim Force in Lebanon (UNIFIL).

- UN Security Council Resolution 1701, Aug. 11, 2006
  The resolution intended to resolve the 2006 Israel-Lebanon conflict. Among others, the resolution calls for the full cessation of hostilities and a withdrawal of Israeli forces parallel to a deployment of Lebanese and UNIFIL soldiers throughout the south of Lebanon, and recalls the need for the full disarmament of all armed groups in Lebanon.

In 1978, the UN peacekeeping mission UNIFIL was created by the Security Council to confirm the Israeli withdrawal from Lebanon, restore international peace and security, and assist the Lebanese government in regaining its effective authority in the area of conflict. The peacekeeping mission has remained in the region ever since. Following the 2006 war, the Security Council significantly expanded UNIFIL's original mandate through resolution 1701 (2006).

This article provides a critical assessment of the 2006 war and the construction of the UN Security Council resolution 1701 that authorized the deployment of robust UN peacekeepers in southern Lebanon. The article argues that UN resolutions have embedded in them a particular powerful discourse, in this case the ‘war on terror’.

This IFI-AUB research study explores Irish peacekeeping within UNIFIL, since 1978 through the expanded UNIFIL after its formation in the aftermath of the 2006 Lebanon war, from historical, social, political, and cultural perspectives. The study draws from interviews with a number of retired and active members of the Irish Defence Forces, academics, and journalists as well as primary and secondary sources including military archives.

Within the UN system, the main entity dealing with refugee issues is the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees (UNHCR), established in 1950 with the mandate to protect refugees and internally displaced persons (IDPs), and resolve refugee issues internationally.

In the Arab world, UNHCR operates most intensively in Lebanon, Syria, Jordan, Iraq and Yemen. In Iraq and Sudan, UNHCR provides aid primarily to IDPs.

Separate from the UNHCR, the United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East (UNRWA) was established in 1949 as a specialized UN agency to provide humanitarian assistance and support to Palestinian refugees, of which there are 5 million registered in the Middle East. More than 1.4 million Palestinian refugees, around one third of the total Palestinian population, live in 58 officially recognized camps.

UNRWA’s services include education, health care, relief, camp infrastructure and improvement, community support, microfinance and emergency response.

In the absence of a solution to the Palestine issue, the UN General Assembly has repeatedly renewed UNRWA’s mandate.
- UN General Assembly Resolution 302 (IV), Dec. 8, 1949
  This UN General Assembly resolution established UNRWA in 1949.

- UN General Assembly, Fourth Committee (Special Political and Decolonization), Voting Record, UN Doc. GA/SPD/472, Nov. 15, 2010
  In 2010, the 4th Committee of the General Assembly extended the mandate of UNRWA until 30 June 2014.

- UN General Assembly Resolution 67/116, Jan. 14, 2013
  In this resolution on the operations of the UNRWA, the General Assembly highlights its deep concerns about the extremely critical financial situation of the Agency, caused in part by the structural underfunding, as well as its rising expenditures resulting from the deterioration of the socioeconomic and humanitarian conditions and the rising instability in the region.

- UN General Assembly Resolution 67/114, Jan. 14, 2013
  In this resolution, the General Assembly notes with regret that repatriation or compensation programs for Palestinian refugees have not yet been effected, and that, therefore, the situation of the Palestine refugees continues to be a matter of grave concern which requires international assistance to meet basic health, education and living needs.

The Convention Relating to the Status of Refugees (CRSR) is a multilateral treaty that defines who is a refugee, and sets out the rights of individuals who are granted asylum and the responsibilities of nations that grant asylum.

The Protocol relating to the Status of Refugees removed both the temporal and geographic restrictions of the CRSR. However, the Convention and Protocol does not apply to those refugees who benefit from the protection or assistance of a United Nations agency other than UNHCR, such as refugees from Palestine who fall under the auspices of UNRWA.

In contrast to the legal regime for the international protection of refugees set up under the 1951 Refugee Convention, a separate regime governs the status of Palestinian refugees which is grounded in special principles enunciated in a series of UN resolutions concerning the Palestinians (e.g. Right of Return). Key documents on this matter can be accessed through the UN Information System on the Question of Palestine (UNISPAL) under: http://unispal.un.org/unispal.nsf/udc.htm

On a regular basis the Secretary General reports to the General Assembly on the work of UNRWA. This 2012 report describes the Agency’s operational context, the principal legal matters affecting UNRWA during the reporting period, the main developments in the Agency’s reform process, operational priorities by field of operation, and the Agency’s program objectives in line with its medium-term strategy for 2010-2015.

This report, submitted pursuant to General Assembly resolution 66/75, focuses on Palestine refugees’ assets and property rights in Israel.

This report responds to the General Assembly’s request to continue to support the institutional strengthening of UNRWA through the provision of financial resources from the regular budget of the UN.

The present report of the Working Group on the Financing of UNRWA provides a detailed outline of the current financial situation of UNRWA.

Established in 1993, the Office of the High Commissioner for Human Rights (OHCHR) aims to promote and protect human rights all over the world. According to its mandate, OHCHR deals with multiple aspects of human rights, including women and children’s rights.

In the Arab region, as in other parts of the world, the strengthening of women’s rights and gender equality remains challenging. The UN Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women (CEDAW) has been ratified by all the Arab countries with the exception of Somalia and the Sudan.

Many Arab countries are still struggling with adopting measures and legislation to eliminate discrimination against women.

The prominence of women’s movements over the last two decades have increasingly given attention to civil, political, economic and social rights of women, which eventually would enable more inclusivity and participation.

In the wake of the recent Arab uprisings, further enhancement of human rights in general, and women’s rights in particular in the Arab world is discussed.

Universal Declaration of Human Rights, Dec. 10, 1948
The Universal Declaration of Human Rights was adopted by the UN General Assembly in 1948, as the result of the experience of the Second World War. The Declaration was drafted by representatives of all regions of the world. It is the most universal human rights document in existence, delineating thirty fundamental rights that aim to form the basis for democratic societies.

Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women,
Sept. 3, 1981
The Convention is the culmination of more than thirty years of work by the United Nations Commission on the Status of Women, a body established in 1946 to monitor the situation of women and to promote women’s rights. The spirit of the Convention is rooted in the goals of the United Nations: to reaffirm faith in fundamental human rights, and emphasize equal rights of men and women.

Introduction

Following the assassination of former Lebanese Prime Minister Rafiq Hariri in February 2005, the UN Security Council established the UN International Independent Investigation Commission (UNIIIC) which focused on investigating the crime scene, technical aspects of the crime, the testimony of more than 500 witnesses and sources, as well as the institutional context in which the crime was committed. At the end of February 2009, UNIIIC ended its mandate and was superseded by the Special Tribunal for Lebanon (STL).

In 2011, the STL issued the first indictments against four suspects (Ayyash et al. case). And in 2012, the Appeals Chamber of the STL affirmed the legality of the court and the use of trials in absentia of the accused, which permits the trials to be held without the presence of the accused. In January 2014, the trial in the Ayyash et al case began. Currently, evidence is being presented before the STL Trial Chamber in Leidschendam in the Netherlands.
Security Council Resolution 1595, April 7, 2005
This Security Council resolution established the UN International Independent Investigation Commission (UNIIIC).

This letter of the Prime Minister of Lebanon to the UN Secretary General states that all domestic options for the ratification of the instruments establishing the Special Tribunal have been exhausted and that a majority of parliamentarians has expressed its support for the Tribunal, and asks the Security Council to put the Statute of the Special Tribunal into effect as a matter of urgency.

Acting under Chapter VII, this Security Council resolution puts the provisions of the “agreement” between the United Nations and the Lebanese Republic on the establishment of a Special Tribunal for Lebanon into force.

» Official UN documents can be accessed on UN ODS under:

Statute of the Special Tribunal for Lebanon, May 16, 2007
The Statute of the Special Tribunal for Lebanon is annexed to Security Council Resolution 1757 (see above). It outlines the jurisdiction and applicable law of the Tribunal, the organization of the STL, rights of defendants and victims, and conduct of proceedings.
- STL Rules of Procedure and Evidence, Nov. 2010

  These rules regulate the conduct of the pre-trial, trial and appellate proceedings, the admission of evidence, the participation of victims, the protection of victims and witnesses. They were drafted by the judges of the STL, and amended several times.

- Report of the Secretary General pursuant to paragraph 6 of Resolution 1644 (2005), UN Doc. S/2006/176, March 21, 2006

  Following a request of the Security Council, this report of the UN Secretary General sets out the nature and scope of the international assistance needed to try, before a tribunal of an international character, those responsible for the terrorist bombing that killed former Lebanese Prime Minister Rafiq Hariri and others.

  This Secretary General report puts forward the general principles of a tribunal of an international character, its personal and subject matter jurisdiction, composition, location and the question of financing, on the basis of consultations between the United Nations Secretariat and the Lebanese authorities.

  Inaugurated in 2009, the STL's mandate is to hold trials for the perpetrators of the February 2005 attack which killed 22 people, including the former prime minister of Lebanon, Rafiq Hariri, and injured many others. The STL is legally not a UN court, but a tribunal of international character with close UN ties. The seat of the tribunal is in Leidschendam, near The Hague, the Netherlands; it has Lebanese and international staff, and tries people under Lebanese criminal law.

Millennium Development Goals

Introduction

The Millennium Development Goals (MDGs) were declared following the UN Millennium Summit and the adoption of the United Nations Millennium Declaration in 2000.

Eight goals are aimed to be accomplished by the year 2015: 1) Eradicating extreme poverty and hunger; 2) Achieving universal primary education; 3) Promoting gender equality and empowering women; 4) Reducing child mortality rates; 5) Improving maternal health; 6) Combating HIV/AIDS, malaria, and other diseases; 7) Ensuring environmental sustainability; and 8) Developing a global partnership for development.

The Arab region has achieved progress regarding many MDGs, however, there have been many setbacks due to inadequate financing of social policies and political conflicts. Among others, unemployment is still high, particularly in rural areas and among the youth. In terms of universal primary education, the Arab region has seen improvement, especially within literacy rates of young adults aged 15-24 and within gender parity in primary schooling. According to the Third Arab Millennium Development Report (2010), Arab countries are on track with respect to halving the proportion of people living below $1.25 a day, yet much more needs to be done to meet the MDGs fully.
UN General Assembly Resolution 55/2, Sept. 18, 2000
This General Assembly resolution includes the United Nations Millennium Declaration, which was adopted by 189 states during the Millennium Summit with the aim to enable, enhance and prolong the lives of people globally. The Declaration is the key contemporary document guiding state efforts and UN activities on economic and social issues.

The International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights (ICESCR) is a multilateral treaty adopted by the UN General Assembly, which commits states to work toward the granting of economic, social, and cultural rights to individuals, including labour rights and the right to health, the right to education, and the right to an adequate standard of living.

The Optional Protocol established complaint and inquiry mechanisms in order to enhance the effectiveness of the ICESCR.

ILO Declaration on Fundamental Principles and Rights at Work, June 18, 1998
Adopted by the ILO’s International Labour Conference in 1998, the ILO’s Declaration on Fundamental Principles and Rights at Work aims at strengthening the connection between economic growth and social justice. The Declaration promotes principles such as: the freedom of association, effective recognition of the right to collective bargaining, elimination of all forms of forced and compulsory labour, effective abolition of child labour, and the elimination of discrimination in respect of employment and occupation.

Climate change is heavily impacting the Arab world. By the end of this century, temperatures are projected to rise by three to four degrees Celsius in the Arab world, which would be 1.5 times faster than the global average. Droughts and floods already account for the majority of climate-related disasters in the region. At the same time, the region is home to some of the world’s biggest per capita emitters of greenhouse gas: Qatar, Kuwait, Saudi Arabia, and Bahrain. The Arab region is already extremely water stressed, while rising temperatures are a further burden to the agriculture-centered economy.

Nearly all Arab states are signatories to the United Nations Framework Convention on Climate Change (UNFCCC), and many of them played a strong role in shaping international climate policy since the establishment of the Convention. Focused on limiting greenhouse gas emissions, UNFCCC was signed at the Rio Earth Summit in 1992. Based on the UNFCCC, the Kyoto Protocol was subsequently adopted in 1997, which sets binding emissions targets.
General Assembly Resolution 43/53, Dec. 6, 1988
This landmark resolution of the General Assembly noted that climate change affects humanity as a whole and should be confronted within a global framework, and endorsed the establishment of the Intergovernmental Panel on Climate Change in order to provide internationally co-ordinated scientific assessments about the environmental and socio-economic impact of climate change.

General Assembly Resolution 63/281, June 11, 2009
In this resolution, the General Assembly urges member states to intensify efforts in considering and addressing climate change and its possible security implications.

Report of the Secretary General on Climate Change and its Possible Security Implications, UN Doc. A/64/350, Sept. 11, 2009
This Secretary General report identifies a set of emerging climate change-related threats which merit the focused attention and increased preparedness of the international community, namely: the loss of territory, statelessness and increased numbers of displaced persons; stress on shared international water resources, for example, with the melting of glaciers, and disputes surrounding the opening of the Arctic region to resource exploitation and trade.

This report of the World Bank, produced in partnership with the League of Arab States, provides information on climate change in the Arab region, as well as technical guidance on adaptation to climate change.

This World Bank report takes both a global as well as a local perspective in assessing the impacts of climate change on the economy, agricultural sector, and households in three of the MENA countries (Syria, Tunisia and Yemen).

Since 2010, Lebanon and Israel have been locked in a dispute related to offshore oil and gas resources in the Levant Basin of the Mediterranean Sea. Geological surveys estimated the existence of about 1.7 billion barrels of oil and 122 trillion cubic feet of gas in the 83,000 km² area off the coasts of Lebanon, Israel, Syria and Cyprus.

Israel and Lebanon have never agreed on a delimitation of their maritime boundaries. In 2011, Lebanon protested at the United Nations against the Maritime Agreement between Israel-Cyprus, complaining that the coordinates defined in the agreement absorb parts of Lebanon’s Exclusive Economic Zone (EEZ). In 2013, Lebanon officially launched the first oil and gas licensing round for offshore drilling and exploration.

Whether the International Tribunal for the Law of the Sea (ITLOS), which was established by the UN Convention on the Law of the Sea (UNCLOS), could play a role in solving the dispute is a matter of debate.

This research handbook provides guidance to students, researchers and practitioners on current UN affairs in the Middle East and Northern Africa. It offers entry-points for exploring the role of the UN in the Arab world while explaining the various facets of the world organization’s activities, which range from political and diplomatic efforts to humanitarian, human rights and economic issues. The handbook includes references to key UN documents, such as relevant Security Council decisions and General Assembly resolutions, relevant legal documents, specialized thematic research guides and selected secondary sources, such as working papers and academic journal articles. Special attention is given to publicly available open-sources and research from the IFI-AUB community.
